

Objectives

1. Discuss if Satoyama, which embraces the notion of a socio-ecological production landscape, can offer a management approach to optimize ecosystem services for human well-being while minimizing the loss of biodiversity;
2. Introduce the International Satoyama Initiative, its objectives and targets; and invite reactions to help design the initiative for maximum effectiveness.

UNITED NATIONS
UNIVERSITY

UNU-IAS

Institute of Advanced Studies

Agenda in the morning (tentative)

Introduction: “Concept of Satoyama landscape and International Satoyama Initiative” by Prof. Kazuhiko Takeuchi

Session 1: Can Ecosystem Services be Optimized or Improved without Loss of Biodiversity through the Human Interaction?

“Progress in evaluating the biodiversity, ecosystem functioning, ecosystem service connection chain” by Prof. Harold Mooney

“Satoyama: Social-ecological Production Landscapes for Human Well-being” by Dr. Anantha Kumar Duraiappah

“From forced self-sustained inhabitancy to preferred sustainable community” by Prof. Noriyuki Tanaka

UNITED NATIONS
UNIVERSITY

UNU-IAS

Institute of Advanced Studies

Agenda in the afternoon (tentative)

---

Session 2: International Satoyama Initiative Concept

Discussion 1: What is a Satoyama-Like Landscape?

- Short break -

Discussion 2: What Should the International Satoyama Initiative Look Like?

- Coffee break –

Chair's Summary

UNITED NATIONS
UNIVERSITY

UNU-IAS

Institute of Advanced Studies